ropean doctors. Just as in religious matters, there is not enough form and ceremony in their mode of treatment to patient. The simple direction, for instance, to wash a sore and keep clean dressings on it, is so devoid of any imaginative ele ment that, (in this Colony at least,) the putient usually reverts to the native doctor who burns paper with lucky characters on it for the mental, as he paints the injured part with a nauseous and useless colored balsam for the physical, relief those who consult him. We note this in order that distant readers may both realize the greater difficulties of medical practice in China than in Europe and to guard against the figures given being accepted as evincing a success greater than it really is. We need hardly say that we desire most sincerely to witness a more extended appreciation of the humane efforts of the members of the Society. But even the figures given-47,595 out-patients and 472 in-patients at the Hospitals of Pok-tsai, Poklo, Shik-lung, Tung-kun, Tai-ping and Kamli-fau-must not be taken as evincing too much, in a district the entire area of which numbers its inhabitants by millions.

The in-patients moreover afford a more reliable index of the public faith in foreign surgery than the returns of out-patients, and we should desire to see a larger number noted than 472. In thus speaking we would desire not to be misunderstood. No efforts have been wanting on the part of those charged with medical duties; but they will scarcely blame us for wishing to see their field of usefulness increased. An interesting feature of the report under notice is to be found in the fact that from March till December the Hospital at Cauton was placed under the care of Dr Wong. Educated in Edinburgh and well accomplished not only as a medical man but in western literature this gentleman still preserves the dress and appearance of "a Chinese of the Chinese" and thus excr-cises a powerful influence for good in exciting confidence amongst native patients.

As one who is able to grasp both sides of the question, Dr Wong's testimony regarding the Chinese is of great value.

We believe that he has come to the conclusion that owing to the abstentious diet, lymphatic temperament, or other causes as regards the native population, their nervous system is less sensitive than that of the more highly educated and carefully tended western. It is to be hoped that he will favour. European readers with some remarks on this subject of surpass ing interest to the medical man, and not devoid of connection with the polical and moral questions which so constantly arise regarding the position of the Chinese as regards western nations. Several native pupils, educated mainly under his superintendence, bid fair to some day equal their master; and it would be difficult to overrate the immense importance of the measures thus taken to edu-cats the Chinese themselves in medical science. We conclude by a quotation
